

Example of Development Chemist Job Description

Powered by www.VelvetJobs.com

Our company is hiring for a development chemist. We appreciate you taking the time to review the list of qualifications and to apply for the position. If you don't fill all of the qualifications, you may still be considered depending on your level of experience.

Responsibilities for development chemist

- Carrying out product development test programmes to achieve agreed performance targets and timescales
- Recording all testing data and formulation information sufficient for report documents for R&D centre
- Supervise and report on pilot production trials and internal / external application product trials
- Maintaining a sufficient knowledge and understanding of the raw materials landscape
- Maintaining a close relationship with raw materials suppliers to ensure technical assessment of latest technologies
- Evaluating alternatively sourced raw materials to assist purchasing cost saving strategies
- Adhering to professional standards that ensure the quality and effectiveness of the laboratory
- Ensuring all testing equipment is maintained and calibrated
- Ensuring periodic testing of concrete and mortar admixtures is undertaken in a timely and efficient manner in accordance with regulatory requirements
- Promote and adhere to safe working practices within the laboratory environment

Qualifications for development chemist

- Excellent communication skills and high level of social competence are required
- A high level of motivation and passion for science and cell culture process development complete your profile
- Proactive and accurate working style and the ability to work independently in a team
- Expert analytical instrument knowledge in areas listed above
- Master's or PhD degree in chemistry, biology, or other related degree concentration, or equivalent directly-related experience (two years of directly related industry experience is equivalent to one full-time year of college in related major)