Our growing company is looking to fill the role of development test engineer. If you are looking for an exciting place to work, please take a look at the list of qualifications below.

Responsibilities for development test engineer

- Design, develop, and contribute to our automation framework which can run use-cases, scenarios and situations end to end
- Analysing Requirements - testability, missing requirements, comes up with the queries & getting them resolved
- Contributes to improvement of test cases based on the requirements and other documents
- Compiling the bugs in a bug reporting tool with a precise description of the encountered issues so they can be easily identified and reproduced
- Tests software releases by executing assigned tests
- Actively participates in project status meetings, review meetings and complete defect management process
- Reports project progress and any problems faced to the Test Lead or Project Manager as required
- Engineer test solutions and support other test engineers in projects
- Define and validate the hardware (PCB)
- Architecture and implement the software (test program) needed for the test solution

Qualifications for development test engineer

- English – upper-intermediate level (at least)
- A good knowledge of working with Microsoft Office package

- MS or PhD in Engineering (ME, EE) or Physics
- Bachelor/Master degree in Electrical Engineering or Computer Science