Our growing company is hiring for a prin engineer. We appreciate you taking the time to review the list of qualifications and to apply for the position. If you don't fill all of the qualifications, you may still be considered depending on your level of experience.

Responsibilities for prin engineer

- Communicates status/issues along with solutions/recommendations to lead engineers
- Drive the Product Master Data strategy by building End-to-End knowledge and applying it with an operating model of people, process, and technology
- As Technical Lead, direct and mentor a small team of engineers to support product development
- Technical Engineer responsible for leading new product development activities relating to medical device
- Technical Lead, direct and mentor a small team of engineers to support product development
- Work as a "hands-on" Engineer in developing new designs and performing troubleshooting on new products/process problems as related to design, material, or process
- Provide guidance for product design and testing that will comply with electrical safety standards
- Assumes technical leadership role in functional area by using technical expertise and knowledge to support new market released technology
- Conducts research and/or manages major programs, reviews technical journals and interfaces with suppliers and outside technical experts
- Participates in intellectual property evaluations and development of patent applications

- Experience in working in Android, Windows and LINUX environments
- Experience in configuration and change management tools
- Bachelor's degree with 8 years' experience, Master's degree with 5 years of experience, or Ph.D
- 3 years medical devices development
- BS in Computer Science or BS in Electrical Engineering
- 7 years of software development experience (or M.S