Our company is looking for a release engineer. If you are looking for an exciting place to work, please take a look at the list of qualifications below.

Responsibilities for release engineer

- Work with database and server support infrastructure teams to plan and execute application / tooling upgrades
- Improve build and release processes by implementing automation tools and scripts to support daily software development, testing, builds and deployment operations
- Document continuous delivery processes, controls, policies and procedures
- The ability to identify problems and judge the seriousness and implications will be key
- Maintain and configure C.I
- Understanding of object orientated programming languages
- To use release lifecycle management tools, and you will gain experience of working in a large scale global portfolio of IT programs supporting the pharmaceutical business areas of research, manufacturing , back office systems, and marketing and sales
- Manage our client's Interactive Platform technology engineering release planning and development for auditor testing, jurisdictional approval and production release
- Coordinate requirement collection, coding, QA testing, compliance certification, release and deployment
- Coordinate this groups engineering schedule with their game studio schedule

Qualifications for release engineer

- Familiarity with LAMP and Open source technologies

- Experience with using source control tools such as SVN and GIT
- Prior experience in a .NET Web Services high load, high volume transaction environment is a must
- Experience with Ruby or Python scripting