Our innovative and growing company is hiring for a revenue cycle analyst. If you are looking for an exciting place to work, please take a look at the list of qualifications below.

Responsibilities for revenue cycle analyst

- Provides technical and strategic input to leadership team to help drive transformational changes
- Provides recommendations on industry and application integration trends in analyzing and planning current and future IT needs
- Provides technical guidance on complex and cross application architecture challenges
- Participates in architecture brainstorming and design discussions with team members
- Responsible for coordinating activities of the technical and functional teams that include resolve system design issues, identify technical and infrastructure requirements, develop testing, training and conversion plans
- Coordinates appropriate resources in the development of foreign system and instrument interface specifications
- Assists in development of detailed project plans in regard to the build tasks necessary to complete the projects
- Assist project teams in planning and coordination of testing and training plans
- Monitors projects continually in terms of the timeline and overall quality
- Monitors exactly where the project is according to plan on a daily basis in order to predict problems earlier and isolate issues that need to be addressed because of the critical effects that they may have on other parts of the project

- Demonstrated ability to solve complex problems using independent judgment
- Strong analytical, troubleshooting and research skills required
- Must have RCM experience
- All applicants must already be Epic Certified in one of the above modules
- All applicants must have at least 5 years' experience as an Analyst
- All applicants must have supported at least two full Epic Implementations (start to finish)