Our company is looking for a safety & occupational health. If you are looking for an exciting place to work, please take a look at the list of qualifications below.

Responsibilities for safety & occupational health

- Enforces and supports all company policies and procedures
- Responsible for development, organization, execution, and assessment of the Tactical Safety Program
- Ensure proper accident notification and investigation procedures are followed
- Serve as the point of contact for accident information within the unit
- Establish a schedule for and conduct compliance inspections and surveys of ranges, organizations, operations, facilities, and equipment to identify operational, facility, and systemic safety and health deficiencies
- Develop lesson plans, support materials
- Develop and create education information to promote safety awareness via unit safety councils, newspaper articles, radio and television spots, safety-grams, newsletters, brochures and other communication tools available
- Conducts periodic OHSE-related audits/inspections / analysis to ensure employee safety and regulatory compliance, prepares action plans, and works with appropriate individuals to ensure successful completion
- Create the site OHSE strategy, based on feedback from corporate and identified site needs
- Able to analyze incident reports, audit findings, employee reports to determine trends and focus areas for the site

Qualifications for safety & occupational health

- Bachelor's degree in occupational hygiene, safety, biological or chemical
• Exceptional knowledge of occupational hygiene and safety challenges in the local market with a focus on hazardous materials and designated substances
• Possess willingness for some limited travel
• Actively working towards certification as an Industrial or Occupational Hygienist (CIH or ROH), a Canadian Registered Safety Professional (CRSP) or other relevant professional accreditation
• Strong knowledge of workplace EHS standards and management systems
• The ability to travel for extended periods of time (up to two weeks at a time or more) and work on a rotational basis outside of local office