Our company is growing rapidly and is looking for a systems development. If you are looking for an exciting place to work, please take a look at the list of qualifications below.

Responsibilities for systems development

- Successfully implements and manages all purchasing support for new restaurant development
- Applying knowledge of all restaurant and kitchen equipment, and engineering to constantly improve equipment designs
- Managing a buyout costs database
- Applying construction experience to the buyout process
- Managing the long-term relative costs of components customarily used in the build-out of Noodles restaurants
- Researching and recommending alternate products, manufacturers, and procedures to improve the quality of restaurants, reduce investment costs, and/or enhance the appeal of restaurants
- Providing consultation to all areas within the Noodles organization
- Coordinate, consolidate and analyze all information gathered as relates to the development of new restaurant projects
- Review information and manage the Work Order Request process, including substantiation that all required information has been gathered and fully inclusive of internal standards of performance
- Manage all phases of outside services contracting required to develop restaurants

Qualifications for systems development

- Fluent in Subversion (software version control)

- SQL Server Business Intelligence Studio
- Proficiency with core AWS services
- 5+ years experience as a business analyst or similar role in information technology, client services, program management, or related experience