Our company is growing rapidly and is looking to fill the role of technology development. If you are looking for an exciting place to work, please take a look at the list of qualifications below.

Responsibilities for technology development

- Extensive knowledge of the Technology vertical, to the extent that you can become a trusted advisor to your clients
- Strong organization skills and the ability to balance executing strategy with the need to deliver short term results
- The ability to influence and communicate with colleagues in other offices, both nationally and internationally
- Support Program Development specifically and Flight Academy end users in all areas of computer hardware, software and peripherals to facilitate continued efficient work flow
- Assist with special projects as required, and coordinate with other teams as necessary to resolve problems, including HP, AA IT, and vendors
- Program, implement, operate, and maintain computer-based training software, Distance Learning (eLearning), and media used in pilot training
- Familiarity with eLearning Management Systems (LMS)
- Research and analyze current industry trends in relation to computer systems in support of flight training, and propose course(s) of action
- Analyze, develop, and document required interfaces/graphics software with local area networks and the internet
- Evaluate computer hardware and software to support the various Instructional Systems and administrative processes

Qualifications for technology development

- Confidently and persuasively convey the merits of
- Have a deep understanding of the high end consumer demographic and the most senior-level business decision-makers and their media and purchasing habits for the technology category
- Meet and exceed monthly, quarterly, and annual advertising and content revenue across all platforms
- Pro-actively manage assigned categories of marketers, analyzing usage trends within categories, and working closely with counterparts in other sales offices in developing new business
- Maximize revenues/share from existing marketers while pro-actively seeking out and converting new business on a consistent basis