

Example of VP, Engineering Job Description

Powered by www.VelvetJobs.com

Our growing company is looking to fill the role of VP, engineering. We appreciate you taking the time to review the list of qualifications and to apply for the position. If you don't fill all of the qualifications, you may still be considered depending on your level of experience.

Responsibilities for VP, engineering

- Develops and directs technical business strategies in support of overall business goals
- Provides management review and control of all engineering work including project development, staff assignment and the application of engineering principles throughout the company
- Attract, develop and retain high caliber talent to achieve 'best-in-class' manufacturing
- Shape and share EDI Services and broader technology vision and strategy to help teams understand the overall direction and the "why" behind decisions
- Acquire and leverage technical knowledge of product suite, with working knowledge of at least product zone
- Identify and manage risks and dependencies for teams within the subdivision in partnership with product management and TPM as applicable
- Accountable for driving organizational results and baseline knowledge of product suite in at least one product zone
- Work with the Engineering Managers to lead the delivery of all of the scrum teams and product lines within a subdivision
- Set the overarching annual business goals and team performance goals for the subdivision, ensuring alignment with the overall product line goals and objectives
- Represent the accomplishments and roadblocks of EDI Organization to CTO and Senior Product Leadership in order to remove obstacles and incentivize

Qualifications for VP, engineering

- Comfortable leading an Agile organization
- Bachelor of Science in Engineering - Mechanical, Electrical
- 10+ years experience in Applied and/or New Product Development
- Background in successfully leading MEMs and ASIC product development teams
- Proven experience and success in development of long range technology development plans
- Demonstrated capability to manage global and cross functional business structure